

Cervical screenings in the afternoon without appointment at the healthcare centres

Women who have received an invitation to attend screening for cervical cancer can now choose between making an appointment and coming without appointment at open houses in the afternoon at healthcare centres in the capital area.

- Those who prefer to show up without appointment can find a list of the healthcare centres that offer this option and information on when this is available on skimanir.is.
- Those who prefer to make an appointment at their healthcare centre can do so through My pages at heilsuvera.is. It is also possible to make an appointment at your preferred healthcare centre by phone.

Samples are taken by midwives and the visit takes only about 10 minutes. The cost is only ISK 500.